

Today, because of you what I learned from you every choice made was different and my life has completely changed.

Dear KWVA

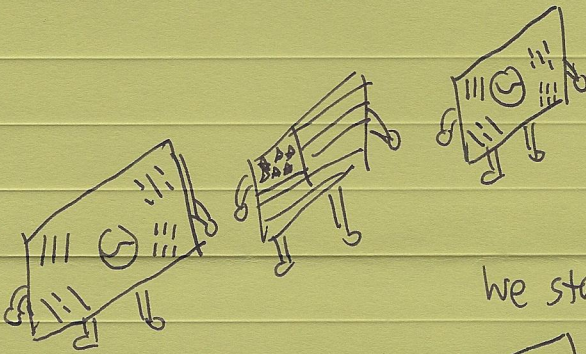

Hello my name is Choi Hyeun Seok who lives in Busan, Korea. I'm 14 years old and it is a great honor for me to speak and write to you brave people. I know it was very hard to live with the experience of war. Many kids think war is fun and cool but the soldiers who experienced it feel the total opposite way. They get away from their families and see their friends fall down to the ground right next to them. It is a very high mountain that all people could experience in their whole lives. But the thing is the real thing that matters than the harsh experiences, are the bravery of the people like you guys, the bravery of KWVA. KWVA stands for Korean War Veteran Association and it is the most ridiculous thing that people would think. They might think that why do these people risk their special and only lives for a bunch of other foreigners that are fighting each other. They think that other countries don't have to think and care about Korea's business. That's the reason why KWVA is so special. They acted and thought differently from others. You guys volunteered for the war to risk your own special lives and saved two or more people. KWVA knows the importance of people's lives and why the people in the world should help. Even if it was a very brave and thankful thing to do that you people risked your lives for our ancestors and the Korean citizens, we think you are special.

Today, because of you what I learned from you every choice made was different and my life has completely changed.

Even if your allies died and many people went into pain the important thing is your courage and the things that you have achieved by volunteering and helping other people in war, NOT being selfish and thinking much more wider. Even I could be afraid if the world were gathering people for war. No one wanted to volunteer that makes you guys special as well. We really give thanks for your sacrifice and we give hope to the people of KWVA by having a large impact. The world needs people like you to help others by risking one. ALSO I want you to never forget, that you are different from other people, a special difference. Thank you.

Kind regards Choi Hyeun Seok

We stand in front of each other...

we protect and risk ourselves

for other...

